

Prohibitions and Restrictions

Because safety comes first

Although we try to carry most things, there are certain items we can't accept for legal and safety reason. We may refuse to accept mail containing these items and if they're found in the post, we may return them to the sender, or dispose of them. In some cases we may hand them to HM Customs or the Police and the sender and/or addressee may be prosecuted.

To comply with strict transport regulations, Isle of Man Post does not carry any substance classified in the latest edition of the International Civil Aviation Organisation's Technical Instructions as being dangerous. These dangerous goods are listed in the following nine hazard classes. Please note that the examples quoted are not exhaustive lists and Isle of Man Post also prohibits other materials and products that may be hazardous to their staff and operation. Additionally, some destinations will not accept specific items not listed here and some items are prohibited from being sent by certain services. Please note that some goods are excluded from inclusive compensation, and on some occasions the delivery speed guarantee is not valid.
