Administrative History:

Marown Parish Commissioners was established in 1894 by the Local Government Amendment Act.

Marown Parish is one of the fifteen parish districts of the Isle of Man. Each parish district is governed by its own local authority, in Marown this is the Marown Parish Commissioners. The members of the Commissioners are elected by the residents of the Parish to administer a range of local government functions and, whenever possible, to represent the Parish by bringing local issues and views to the attention of central government and other outside parties. These functions include:

- Public information and advice
- Tourism
- Refuse collection
- Street-lighting
- Environmental health
- Public conveniences
- Parks, playgrounds and other leisure facilities
- Control of dogs
- Housing
- Car-parking
- Street-cleaning
- Building control
- Planning
- Sewerage
- Libraries and museums
- Abandoned vehicles

The Commissioners hold monthly public meetings, to take decisions on cases relating to the above functions.

Custodial History: Records were kept in the offices of Marown Parish Commissioners until 2006/2007, at which point they were removed to the custody of the Isle of Man Public Record Office.
