Administrative History: The Treasury Act 1985 came into force on 2 December 1985. Under the Act, a new 'Treasury' department was formed to take over the responsibilities of the former Finance Board, Government Treasurer and Assessment Board. Prior to December 1985, the role of Government Treasurer existed within the Government Office and sources suggest that during the late 1960s and 1970s the number of staff dedicated solely to finance within the Government was increasing. From 1968, sources such as the 'Manx Year Book' and 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' refer to a 'Finance department' within the Government Office. From 1970, the Finance department is listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' as a separate department from the Government Office and from 1973, the name of the department has changed to the 'Treasury'.

From the mid-1970s onwards, the Treasury began to employ an Economist/Statistician (the post is first listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' in 1975) and later expanded to include an 'Economic Affairs' division. The 'Economic Affairs' division separated from the Treasury and became part of the newly created Cabinet Office in April 2014.

Isle of Man Public Record Office

In February 2015, the role of the Treasury (as stated on its website) included coordination of the Isle of Man Government budget, implementation of taxation strategy and the assessment and collection of income tax, internal audit, administration of social security benefits and the collection of customs revenue.

Custodial History: Records in S34 were stored in Illiam Dhone House, Douglas by the Treasury. When the Economic Affairs division of the Treasury moved to the Policy and Strategy division of the Cabinet Office it also moved premises to the Government Office. At this point the records were appraised and selected for permanent preservation. Records in S34 were transferred over to the Isle of Man Public Record Office under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act on 23 September 2014 as part of a larger accession of records (A20).

Appraisal: Selected for permanent preservation in 2014. During cataloguing, some duplicates were removed.

Arrangement of series: No evident original order or clear filing system could be determined within the files at the time of cataloguing. Files have subsequently been arranged in 33 sub-series by topic within the catalogue:

Records of the Economic Affairs division: Economic Quarterly (publication)

1990-1995

Accession number: A20

Extent: 45 sheets

Creator: Isle of Man; Treasury; 1985-Present

Description of series: Issues 1-22 of a quarterly publication by the Isle of Man Treasury providing information on the Isle of Man economy.

Administrative History: The Treasury Act 1985 came into force on 2 December 1985. Under the Act, a new 'Treasury' department was formed to take over the responsibilities of the former Finance Board, Government Treasurer and Assessment Board. Prior to December 1985, the role of Government Treasurer existed within the Government Office and sources suggest that during the late 1960s and 1970s the number of staff dedicated solely to finance within the Government was increasing. From 1968, sources such as the 'Manx Year Book' and 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' refer to a 'Finance department' within the Government Office. From 1970, the Finance department is listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' as a separate department from the Government Office and from 1973, the name of the department has changed to the 'Treasury'.

From the mid-1970s onwards, the Treasury began to employ an Economist/Statistician (the post is first listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' in 1975) and later expanded to include an 'Economic Affairs' division. The 'Economic Affairs' division separated from the Treasury and became part of the newly created Cabinet Office in April 2014.

In February 2015, the role of the Treasury (as stated on its website) included coordination of the Isle of Man Government budget, implementation of taxation strategy and the assessment and collection of income tax, internal audit, administration of social security benefits and the collection of customs revenue.

At this point the records were appraised and selected for permanent preservation. Records in S35 were transferred over to the Isle of Man Public Record Office under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act on 23 September 2014 as part of a larger accession of records (A20).

Records of the Economic Affairs division: records relating to the Working Party on Transport and Distribution

1977-1985

Accession number: A20

Extent: 5 folders

Creator: Isle of Man; Treasury; 1985-Present

Description of series: Working papers of the Senior Government Economist of the Isle of Man Treasury relating to the Working Party on Transport and Distribution. The Working Party on Transport and Distribution was appointed by the Tynwald Steering Committee on Transport and consisted of Mr J. H. Webster, Senior Government Economist, Mr H. A. Moore, Secretary of the Harbour Board, Mr W. H. Vincent, Secretary of the Highways Board and Mr N. L. Clague, Secretary of the Airports Board. Mr Loftus of the Treasury acted as secretary for the Working Party. The records include draft and final reports of the Working Party, reference material collected for research, correspondence and some handwritten minutes.

Administrative History: The Treasury Act 1985 came into force on 2 December 1985. Under the Act, a new 'Treasury' department was formed to take over the responsibilities of the former Finance Board, Government Treasurer and Assessment Board. Prior to December 1985, the role of Government Treasurer existed within the Government Office and sources suggest that during the late 1960s and 1970s the number of staff dedicated solely to finance within the Government was increasing. From 1968, sources such as the 'Manx Year Book' and 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' refer to a 'Finance department' within the Government Office. From 1970, the Finance department is listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' as a separate department from the Government Office and from 1973, the name of the department has changed to the 'Treasury'.

From the mid-1970s onwards, the Treasury began to employ an Economist/Statistician (the post is first listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' in 1975) and later expanded to include an 'Economic Affairs' division. The 'Economic Affairs' division separated from the Treasury and became part of the newly created Cabinet Office in April 2014.

Isle of Man Public Record Office

In February 2015, the role of the Treasury (as stated on its website) included coordination of the Isle of Man Government budget, implementation of taxation strategy and the assessment and collection of income tax, internal audit, administration of social security benefits and the collection of customs revenue.

Custodial History: Records in S37 were stored in Illiam Dhone House, Douglas by the Treasury. When the Economic Affairs division of the Treasury moved to the Policy and Strategy division of the Cabinet Office it also moved premises to the Government Office. At this point the records were appraised and selected for permanent preservation. Records in S37 were transferred over to the Isle of Man Public Record Office under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act on 23 September 2014 as part of a larger accession of records (A20).

Appraisal: Selected for permanent preservation by IOMPRO in 2014. Some duplicate items were removed at the time of cataloguing.

Access Status: Open

Records of the Industrial Office: 'See: The Isle of Man at Work' (publication)

1980-1983

Accession number: A20

Extent: 1 folder

Creator: Isle of Man; Industrial Office; 1961-?

Description of series: 10 issues of 'See: the Isle of Man at Work', a newsletter published by the Industrial Office of the Isle of Man.

Administrative History: In April 1961, the Industrial Advisory Council was formed to advise Tynwald on industrial policy for the Isle of Man. The Industrial Office, established at the same time, was responsible for implementing this policy. The work of the Industrial Office included administering grant aid and funding schemes to support industrial growth. The Industrial Advisory Council was replaced on 15 December 1981 by the Industry Board (as a result of The Industry Board Act 1981); however the Industrial Office continued to exist [until at least 1983] implementing policy of the new Industry Board.

Custodial History: Records in S41 were stored in Illiam Dhone House, Douglas by the Treasury. When the Economic Affairs division of the Treasury moved to the Policy and Strategy division of the Cabinet Office it also moved premises to the Government Office. At this point the records were appraised and selected for permanent preservation. Records in S41 were transferred over to the Isle of Man Public Record Office under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act on 23 September 2014 as part of a larger accession of records (A20).

Appraisal: Selected for permanent preservation by IOMPRO in 2014.

S42

Records of the Economic Affairs division: records relating to the Standing Committee on the Common Interests of the Isle of Man and the United Kingdom

1964-1984

Accession number: A20

Extent: 1 folder

Description of series: Working papers of J.H. Webster, Economist/Statistician, relating to the Standing Committee and issues of common interest between the Isle of Man and United Kingdom. The series comprises 1 file which includes some draft minutes, copies of correspondence, briefing papers and memoranda. The series does not include comprehensive records of all the activities and meetings of the Committee.

Administrative History: The Treasury Act 1985 came into force on 2 December 1985. Under the Act, a new 'Treasury' department was formed to take over the responsibilities of the former Finance Board, Government Treasurer and Assessment Board. Prior to December 1985, the role of Government Treasurer existed within the Government Office and sources suggest that during the late 1960s and 1970s the number of staff dedicated solely to finance within the Government was increasing. From 1968, sources such as the 'Manx Year Book' and 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' refer to a 'Finance department' within the Government Office. From 1970, the Finance department is listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' as a separate department from the Government Office and from 1973, the name of the department has changed to the 'Treasury'.

From the mid-1970s onwards, the Treasury began to employ an Economist/Statistician (the post is first listed in the 'Isle of Man Examiner Annual' in 1975) and later expanded to include an 'Economic Affairs' division. The 'Economic Affairs' division separated from the Treasury and became part of the newly created Cabinet Office in April 2014.

In February 2015, the role of the Treasury (as stated on its website) included coordination of the Isle of Man Government budget, implementation of taxation strategy and the assessment and collection of income tax, internal audit, administration of social security benefits and the collection of customs revenue.

Custodial History: Records in S42 were stored in Illiam Dhone House, Douglas by the Treasury. When the Economic Affairs division of the Treasury moved to the Policy and Strategy division of the Cabinet Office it also moved premises to the Government Office. At this point the records were appraised and selected for permanent preservation.
