Foreword by the Minister for Infrastructure

I am pleased to invite comments on the proposed legislation, the Local Government and Building Control (Amendment) Bill 2016.

This short piece of legislation seeks to amend several enactments in relation to local government and building control and provides for the introduction of fixed penalties in connection with certain statutory notices and following contravention of certain byelaws.

Some of the proposals in the Bill have already been the subject of consultation with interested parties and a working group which involved officers from the Departments of Infrastructure, Economic development, Environment, Food and Agriculture and from Douglas Borough Council.

The Bill is also intended to address a number of issues raised by a Report of the Council of Ministers on Environment and Infrastructure Policy. Under that Report there is a requirement to –

"E1 8.4 Work in partnership with local authorities to improve the management and control of unsightly and dilapidated properties that have a negative impact on our communities"

The Department has also taken the opportunity to amend the legislation as it relates to the maintenance of open land or gardens as well as dilapidated buildings.

Thank you for taking the time to review this document and I look forward to receiving your comments.

Hon. Phil Gawne MHK

Minister for Infrastructure

1 A Report by CoMin dated May 2013 (GD No:023/13)
Issued: November 2015
1. Summary of the main provisions of the Bill

The Bill amends 3 separate Acts –

(i) the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1984 ("the 1984 Act");
(ii) the Local Government Act 1985 ("the 1985 Act"); and
(iii) the Building Control Act 1991 ("the 1991 Act").

Clause 5 – amends section 14 (maintenance of open land) of the 1984 Act by –

(i) substituting a new section 14(1) regarding unsightly land or gardens by –
   (a) inserting the phrase "detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood";
   (b) making it clear that any detriment can also be caused by "the presence of anything on the land"; and
   (c) adding provisions which will require that the owner or occupier has to take steps not only to remedy the detriment but also "to prevent the detriment from occurring or recurring".

Policy reasons - The new provisions will effectively lower the standard (with regard to unsightly land only) to allow local authorities to take pre-emptive action rather than having to wait until the land was "in such a condition as seriously to injure the amenities of the neighbourhood" (as s.14(1) of the 1984 Act currently states).

The use of the wording "detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood" will mirror similar wording used in section 24(1) of the Building Control Act 1991 relating to dilapidated buildings. This similarity of wording will assist local authorities with their understanding of the legislation.

The use of the term "the presence of anything on the land" will clarify that the detriment covers articles deposited on the land as well as the condition of the land itself.

In order to comply with a statutory notice, some owners or occupiers only take limited action or undertake minimal works to remedy the condition of the land. However, in some cases they then take no further action to properly maintain the land so that the problem often reoccurs. The local authority is then obliged to take further action and incur additional enforcement costs including potential legal costs. The revised provisions should facilitate the on-going management of the land to help prevent the detriment from recurring.

(ii) Inserting a new sub section (4) which will specify that a statutory notice is not invalid merely on the grounds that any other garden or land in the neighbourhood is in a condition where it could be classed as being "detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood".

Policy reason - The new provisions are intended to cover situations where a whole area may be run down and several gardens appear, in the authorised officer's view, to be "detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood". In such cases, the local authority would need to demonstrate that they were also taking enforcement action in respect of any other gardens that were in a similar condition (the only difference being that the enforcement proceedings were not at such an advanced stage).
Clause 6 – insertion of new section 14A in the 1984 Act

The new section 14A will allow “authorised officers” of local authorities, who are responsible for enforcing the legislation, to take prompt enforcement action regarding unsightly land by means of Fixed Penalty Notices (“FPN’s”). The FPN will be £100.00 although that amount could be amended by an Order made by the Department. The FPN would apply in cases where a person is guilty of an offence under section 58(7) of the Local Government Act 1985 as a result of failure to comply with a statutory notice under section 14 of the 1984 Act. The FPN will offer the person the opportunity of discharging any liability to conviction for an offence under section 58(7) of the 1985 Act by payment of a fixed penalty.

Policy reason - The option of being able to take action by means of FPNs will assist authorities with the enforcement of the legislation. Authorities are sometimes reluctant to take enforcement action through the courts because of the potential costs involved or the time taken to progress such action. Also, if the degree of detriment to the land was minor authorities are conscious that under the current legislation that a person might end up with a criminal record if convicted for what could be perceived as a “minor” offence. However, local authorities need to recognise that if a FPN is not paid then the authority would need to consider recovering the penalty by way of civil debt and undertaking any remedial work themselves or alternatively proceeding to full prosecution through the Courts.

Clause 8 - amends the Local Government Act 1985 Act (“the 1985 Act”) by –

(i) Inserting a new section 30A which will allow authorised officers of a local authority or the Department to issue FPNs (of a £100.00) if it appears to that officer that a person has contravened a byelaw made by the authority or the Department (and where specific FPN provision is not otherwise made in other legislation). The FPN would apply in cases where a person has contravened a byelaw made under a “relevant enactment”. The FPN will offer the person the opportunity of discharging any liability to conviction for an offence under the byelaw by payment of a fixed penalty. “Relevant enactment” means an enactment conferring power to make byelaws on the Department or a local authority and for which specific provision is not otherwise made.

Policy reason - Local authorities are already able to issue FPNs in respect of offences committed under dog control byelaws. The new powers will also allow authorities (and the Department) to issue FPNs for offences under, for example, General Byelaws.

(ii) amending section 58(7) of the 1985 Act by increasing the maximum level of fines imposed by the courts in respect of non-compliance with statutory notices (requesting the execution of works) from £2,500 to £5,000 and the daily fine from £40 to £50 for each day the default continues.

Policy reason – the level of fines has not been increased for a number of years and as there will now be a FPN for £100.00 there needs to be a greater differential between the amount of a court fine and the amount specified in a FPN.

Issued: November 2015
Clause 10 amends the Building Control Act 1991 ("the 1991 Act") by -

(i) Amending section 24 of the 1991 Act by the insertion of additional powers which will mean that the owner or occupier has to take steps not only to remedy the detriment to any dilapidated building but also "to prevent the detriment from occurring or recurring".

Policy reason – following the receipt of a statutory notice, some owners or occupiers only take limited action or undertake minimal works to remedy the dilapidated condition of a building. However, they then take no further action to properly maintain the building so that the problem often reoccurs. The local authority is then obliged to take further action and incur additional enforcement costs including potential legal costs. The revised provisions should facilitate the on-going management of the building and help prevent the detriment from recurring.

(ii) Inserting a new sub section (4) which will specify that a statutory notice is not invalid merely on the grounds that any other buildings in the neighbourhood are in a similar condition and therefore could be classed as being "detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood".

Policy reason - The new provisions are intended to cover situations where a whole area may be run down and several buildings were, in the authorised officer’s view, "detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood". In such cases, the local authority would need to demonstrate that they were also taking enforcement action in respect of any other buildings that were in a similar dilapidated condition (the only difference being that the enforcement proceedings were not at such an advanced stage).

(iii) Insertion of new section 24ZA in the 1991 Act

The new section 24ZA will allow “authorised officers” of local authorities, who are responsible for enforcing the legislation, to take prompt enforcement action regarding dilapidated buildings by means of FPN’s. The FPN will be £100.00 although that amount could be amended by an Order made by the Department. The FPN would apply in cases where a person is guilty of an offence under section 58(7) of the Local Government Act 1985 as a result of failure to comply with a statutory notice under section 24 of the 1991 Act. The FPN will offer the person the opportunity of discharging any liability to conviction for an offence under section 58(7) by payment of a fixed penalty.

Policy reason - The option of being able to take action by means of FPNs will assist authorities with the enforcement of the legislation. Authorities are sometimes reluctant to take enforcement action through the courts because of the potential costs involved or the time taken to progress such action. Also, if the degree of detriment to the building was minor authorities are conscious that under the current legislation that a person might end up with a criminal record if convicted for what could be perceived as a "minor" offence. However, local authorities need to recognise that if a FPN is not paid then the authority would need to consider recovering the penalty by way of civil debt and undertaking any remedial work themselves or alternatively proceeding to full prosecution through the Courts.

(2) For subsection (1) substitute —

«(1) If it appears to a local authority that any garden or vacant or other open land in its district is by virtue of lack of cultivation, the presence of anything on the land, or for any other reason in such a condition as to be detrimental to the amenities of the neighbourhood or that such detriment is likely to occur or recur, the authority may by notice require the owner or the occupier of the land within the time specified in the notice to take such steps as are specified in the notice for abating the detriment, or, as the case may be, to prevent the detriment from occurring or recurring.».

(3) At the end insert —

«(4) A notice under subsection (1) is not invalid merely on the ground that any other garden or land in the neighbourhood is in the condition mentioned in that subsection.».

6 Insertion of section 14A
