Definitive PROW Statement

This is the Definitive Statement as required under Section 6 of the relevant Act, and as such describes the commencement and termination of public rights of way as set out previously in the provisional Statements No1, 2 and 3, subject to any such modifications that have found to be necessary and with the addition of several footpaths established by dedication.

The numbering of the ensuing Public Rights of Way was established in 1941 by the Isle of Man Highway and Transport Board when the first known record of Public Rights of Way was compiled to enable the Board to discharge its duties under the Rights of Way Act, 1933. The System was adhered to by the Rights of Way Committee (1954) for their hearings and subsequent report dated September, 1955. As all the Board's records on Public Rights of Way refer to this numbering system, it has been decided to continue to use it for the implementation of the current Act.

There are 338 public rights of way with a total length of 316kms.

Further Information

The Department of Infrastructure maintains the public rights of way in the Island; 338 public rights of way make up a network 316km long.

Historically routes or paths taken by fishermen, miners and farmers as they journeyed between their homes and workplaces contributed to the network of paths over the Island and these, along with short cuts, paths to public transport, ancient highways and ridgeways formed the basis of the paths that were established by the Public Rights of Way Acts 1961 to 1970.

The procedure to establish these rights of way dates from 1933 at which time legislation was introduced to enable the Highway and Transport Board, the Island's Highway Authority, to discharge its duties with regard to the rights of way.

The first written record of rights of way was not until 1941, when the numbering system, which is still used today, was established. The Board held meetings with all the local authorities in the Island to ascertain which rights of way were claimed to exist and the alleged paths were then marked on maps of the 6" Ordnance Survey.

These maps became the base for the next stage which was to take place between 1954 and 1955. A Rights of Way Committee was formed at the instigation of the Lieutenant Governor, Sir Ambrose Flux Dundas, in order to update the 1941 maps firstly under the chairmanship of Mr T E Brownsden and later His Honour R B Moore.

Public meetings were, again, held in the Parishes, the maps being available some weeks before the meeting. At the conclusion of the meetings in late 1955, the Committee issued its report. As a matter of interest, 82% of the alleged paths were agreed to at that time with about 6% needing further investigation. The Committee reported to the Lieutenant Governor recommending new legislation to be put before the Island's Parliament.

A new bill was proposed, presented to the House of Keys and finally passed in 1961. The Public Rights of Way Act 1961 specified the duties of the Highway Board in preparing Provisional Maps, the establishment of a Public Rights of Way Tribunal and the eventual preparation of Definitive Maps.

Up to the date of the Act, the establishment of rights of way was by custom, user, or agreement. By Means of the Public Rights of Way Act, following the publication of the Definitive Maps, the Rights of Way were to become established for all time through statute.

It differed fundamentally from the UK Access to Parks and Countryside Act 1949 in that it required notice to be served on every owner, lessee and occupier of land over which an alleged right of way passed, whereas UK required only the exhibition of maps at specified places. A minimum width of path was specified in the Act at three feet, copies of the Provisional Maps and Provisional statement were to be deposited in various police stations for public viewing and the Board was required to send by registered post to every owner, lessee or occupier of land affected by an alleged right of way, a notice specifying the nature and position of the right of way, a copy of that portion of the Provision Map and a copy of the Provisional Statement which referred to the path. These notices had to be issued on a "relevant date".

This obviously presented an enormous problem for the Board's officers, one path perhaps having 15 owners and 8 or 9 occupiers or lessees all having to be traced and checked.

The Board was also concerned that although land owners had a right to object, the public had no right to add to the Provisional Maps. So that all interested parties had a chance to ensure that the Provisional Maps contained all available information, they arranged for copies of the Maps to be exhibited and invited the views of the public.

A further 200 paths were submitted all of which were investigated and a number were included on the Provisional Maps. Following this 2,000 notices were posted on the 29th May, 1973, with a time limit of 3 months for objections to be received. At the end of this 3 month period out of 450 alleged rights of way, objections were received to just under 200. These objections varied from an out and out condemnation fo a path to saying that the route of a path as shown was wrong. Many of the alleged rights of way had not been used for many years, making it difficult and in some cases impossible to establish any public right because of the lack of evidence. With many other paths being used only by neighbours or persons in the immediate area, much difficulty was experienced in trying to establish a general public right as opposed to a favour between neighbours.

By 1980, any outstanding paths were cleared up and the information was available for the publication of the Definitive Maps and Statement. Theses were issued in March 1982 showing nearly 300 established paths.

During 1979, Tynwald celebrated its Millennium ad the Board decided that a fitting contribution would be to establish its first long distance walk based on an ancient ridgeway between Ramsey in the North and Castletown in the South, along which the Kings of Man travelled to their capital. This was known as the Via Regia - the Royal Way.

The Millennium Way passes over some of the most scenic parts of the Island and has proved to be a great success.
